

-----Original Message-----

From: Chuck Tribolet [<mailto:triblet@garlic.com>]

Sent: Sunday, September 18, 2005 6:07 AM

To: Chuck Tribolet

Cc: John R. Wolfe; ccrsgcomments@resources.ca.gov; Marc Shargel; Jesus Ruiz; Mark St.Angelo; Stephen M Barrager; Rick Starr; Mark Carr

Subject: Re: Evaluation Criteria Matrix for Existing MPAs

Upon further reflection, I'd like to make it clear that I think that the enforcement radius concept has merit, but that 25 miles is too high, at least for the RIB that DFG has in Monterey. It might well be a good number, or even a bit low for the big catamarans DFG recently acquired, but there isn't one based in Monterey.

There also needs to be a rapid and effective response to 1-888-CAL-TIPP.

Only if there's a perception in the consumptive community that "if you fish in a protected area you WILL get busted" will they care enough to educate themselves on where the protected areas are.

Chuck Tribolet

<http://www.almaden.ibm.com/cs/people/triblet/>

Silicon Valley: STILL the best day job in the world.

Chuck Tribolet wrote:

> The 25 mile distance for enforcement is too high. I've seen DFG's big > RIB in Carmel Bay exactly once. I've seen it Monterey Bay at least > couple of dozen times. So it's clear to me that DFG isn't an > effective deterrent in Carmel Bay because they aren't there. The good > news is that it's the nice days when the deterrent is needed, and so > it's easy for DFG to get south. The bad news is that IS needed. I > very regularly shoo fishermen out of Pt. Lobos.

>

>

> Chuck Tribolet

> <http://www.almaden.ibm.com/cs/people/triblet/>

>

> Silicon Valley: STILL the best day job in the world.